Special Issue on: “Engineering Applications of Evolutionary Computation”

Evolutionary algorithms are powerful nature-inspired optimization algorithms. They model the essential elements of biological evolution and explore the solution space by gene inheritance, mutation and selection of the fittest candidate solutions. Evolutionary methods have proven their success on various hard and complex optimization problems. This special issue will focus on the engineering applications of evolutionary computation, e.g. genetic algorithms, evolution strategies, genetic programming, particle swarm optimization, ant colony optimization, artificial immune systems, estimation of distribution algorithms, differential evolution, and memetic algorithms.

The aim of this special issue is to reflect recent advances in the practical aspects of evolutionary computation. Topics of interest include, but are not limited to:

- Engineering design
- Intelligent systems
- Wireless networks and sensor networks
- Scheduling
- Computer vision and image processing
- Database management and design
- Intelligent transportation systems
- Decision support systems
- Control systems
- Data mining
- Case studies of industrial applications
